

There are some days which come and go as they wish. Nothing is real anymore, there are so many obstacles in this life, are we alone in our thinking and thought process as it were? Whose to say how any of this life or world will form and shape itself as we grow beyond our own abilities and programming. Do not we have such an internal programming? Are we not concerned with everything which comes down our own path? Out of all the many thoughts and Ideas out there, one would guess it's more than a simple aspect of life which we grasp hold of. Perhaps this is complete nonsense. Maybe it is something else. Either way we must not be able to think we cannot do something. It is all within our power and our grasp. But, how far is our reach exactly? What sphere of influence do we have to deal with? How exactly does all of that work, how does that happen?

Perhaps there are days which don't matter and won't make a bit of difference in the long run. We are all but weird creatures swamped within our own mortal coil or shell. We cannot be allowed to overthink or underthink the possibilities which will eventually come along our path. Is it in our own destruction to find that which we cannot find on our own? How does a person even begin to comprehend such a thought process? Is it not the right time to wonder and grasp that which we cannot hold onto in our lives? Maybe I am at a loss as to the thoughts within my own mind. An odd cage as it were. Something of naught upon which everything is founded.)

Feels like I'm quoting more quotes
or something

However to live our lives in harmony and to be true to ourselves, we must want to have such a truth made upon us. We have got to be able to find whatever truth there is to be had and seek after it. It doesn't matter how many people are following a specific truth, even if it is a small number, that truth's validity doesn't diminish. It is still truth. To seek after truth is a good thing, a godly thing. Truth is an amazing thing to behold.

Wherever truth may be found, if it is good, we must seek after it. Truth and fact do not always agree with each other. There is truth and then there is righteous truth. Know the difference.

So what of it? Who makes the final decision when it comes down to the possibility nothing matters in this life? Who is to say exactly what will happen to my family? Not everything is so cut and dry. Everything comes at a price. Nothing is free as far as anything is concerned. Are we not simply sheep huddled together hoping our master will come back someday? If so, where does that leave us?

To feel happy, to be happy, in this life we are to try and acknowledge we have a say in how this life turns out. It is not destiny, it is not some kind of pre determined thought process. Nothing of that kind of thinking exists. If we are wrong, then we are wrong. There comes a time in a person's thought process which we must strive to be greater than what we currently are. There is nothing wrong with this. Everything will continue to breakdown and give way. Why bother with any of it? Whose to say people won't be together in the life hereafter? Whose to understand and grasp fully how this life will end? No one has a full grasp of what is going on. Not even those in higher up places of management. Long gone are the days where someone said Thus saith the Lord for we are now told they, some, were speaking as men and their words are not to be taken as doctrine, even though they themselves claimed it to be doctrine.

There are so many different things to consider in this life. Doctrine shouldn't be confusing at all. Why the need to make things so difficult for this life as it were? There doesn't need to be anything so stupid or selfish from any of it.

This doesn't quite make sense. Are we here for the right reasons or are we simply here to be puppets, a lab experiment for some God who enjoys watching his children suffer and wander in unbelief. Hoping they'll follow him